lifere is a from the anvil of the d Kibbs Berritt :--

You cannot go into the mundow and plank up a single daisy by the roots without breaking up a seriety of nice relations, and descening a principle more extensive and refined than more gravitation. The handful of earth that follows the tiny roots of the little flowers replate with seeind elemans. A little secial circle had been formed around last garminating daisy. The sun-beam the social circle had been formed around that germineling dairy. The sun-beam and the dew-drop met there, and the soft summer breeze came whispering through the tail grass to join the silent rescert; and the earth teek them to their heaten, and introduced them to their heaten, and introduced them to the dairy germ; and they all went to work to show that flower to the sun. Fach mingled in the honey of its interesce, and they nersed the wee, canny thing, with an aliment that made it gray. And when it lifted its eyes towgrow. And when it lifted its eyes towards the sky, they were a soft carpet for its feet. And the sen saw it thre' the green leaves, and smiled as he passed on; and then by starlight and mounlight they worked on. And the daisy lifted up its lead, and one morning, white the sun was looking upon the dews, it put on its silver rimmed diadem, and showed its yellow petals to the stars. And it nodded to the little birds that were swimming in the sky wings come ; and birds in black, and gray, and quaker-brown, and the cour-tesying yellow-bird came, and each rung native air at the coronation of that dainy.

Everything that sung or shore upon that wee, modest flower, was a member of that social circle, and conspired to its harmony and added to its Heaven—earth, sky, and sea, were its companions; the sen and stars walked have in hand with it, as kindly as if they never new another daisy, or had anoth er companion. The soler ocean-even winged clouds with sweet-savored dews

"Da A. M. Mauriceau—My Deer Sir. The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion, is which I enclosed one dollar to your address came safely to head. I would not have troubled you with these few lines, but that I am impelled by sense of gratitude, for myself and wife, to give utterace to our sincere and heartfelt emailous.

"My wife has been perceptibly sinking for some three years or more, in consequence of her great anguish and suffering aoms months before and during confinement; every successive one more and more debilitated and prostrated her, putting her life in laminent danger, and which was, on the last excesses, despaired of. I supposed that this state of things we inevitable, and resigned myself to meet the word. At this time (now about two months) I heard year book highly spaken of as comtaining some matter reaching my case. On its receipt and persaal, I can not express to you the reflef it afforded my distressed mind and this joy its pages imparted to my wife, on learning that the great discovery of M. M. Decoment provided a semedy. It opened a prospect to me which I little conseised was possible. No pecuniary consideration can over repay the obligation I am under to you for baving been the means of imparting to us the matters contained in 'The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion.' But for this, ere another year would have passed over my head, in all human probability my wife would have been in her grave, and my children left motherism.'

"My Dran Sine: I know you will have the kind ness to hear with me in encrosching upon your time, while I acknowledge (in behalf of myself and wife the obligations we feel ourselves under to you in having made known certain matters, contained in you most invaluable. Married Woman's Frivais Medical Companion." It has been worth its weight in gold to me. If I express myself rather warmly, you will see that I can not do so the warmly, when I inform you of the extent to which I have, through it, been benefited. I will state my eltuntion when I obtained your brook through the morrest certosity. I look upon it as one of the most fortunate events of my life. I had been married some ten years, and was the father of seven children. I was long struggling uncessingly to the end that I might gain a moderate competercy, bet the results of my utmost exertions at the end left me about where I was at the beginning of each year. me about where I was at the beginning of each year, and that only, with the most stinted economy, sufficing with barely the necessaries of life. Finally, the constant effort was beginning to have its effect upon my bealth: I felt less capable to endure its continuous ance, while I felt the necessity of perseverance.

"This constant, unceasing struggle on my part was imperative, in consequence of the preservated contition of my wife less had been confined to her bed, and of course incepable of taking the charge and management of household affairs. Her condition store from causes of which I was ignorant. On! what would have given had I the six years to live over again. What would any wife have given to have been spend the long days and still langer nights prostrate or a head of sickness!— all of which would have been said the long days and still langer nights prostrate or a head of sickness!— all of which would have been avoided, had I then seen a copy of 'THE MARKED WOMAR'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPARIOR." me about where I was at the begin

Letters are daily received of this character, uncecentary to present.

To those yet unmarried, but contemplating marrings, or perhaps hesitating as to the propriety of incurring the responsibilities attendant upon it, the importance of being possessed of the revelations contained in those pages, so intimately involving their fatters happiness, can not be appreciated.

It is, of course, impracticable to convey more fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a seture strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage; neither is it necessary, since it is every one's duty to become possessed of howadas whereby the sufferings to which a wide, much er, or a sinter, may be subject, can be obvisted.
